You live in Valencia and you have been unemployed for several years. You used to work in a pottery workshop with your siblings because you belong to a family of artisans and you love it. You studied your compulsory years in high school but you have been working in the pottery for ten years now. Your two brothers work in different enterprises now because they earn more money than they did in the pottery. Your sister has become a teacher, it was her dream. So now you work more than ten hours per day and you overspend money because you spend more than you earn. Should you switch jobs?

Your best friend is ... and this year he / she is getting married. You were sure they were getting married next year until your friend sent you a message to confirm your attendance. Here you realize the wedding is next week. You have been spending a lot of money because you have been invited to parties almost every week this year and, obviously, there's no party if you aren't there. Now, summer is over, but you're happy because you have been to Thailand, Turkey and Japan. So there's no money left and no one lets you money because they know you are a defaulting party-going. What should you do?

You have been waiting for ten minutes next to your history teacher because you want to talk to him about the II World War. Accidentally, you have heard that your teacher said to the Spanish teacher that your best friend is going to fail history again because he / she has been cheating. You know that your friend has studied hard for this exam and it is unfair for him / her. You know it will come a surprise for him in the last school card. What are you going to do? Are you telling him / her? Your teacher will know you have been listening to their conversation. Will you stay silent? It will be extremely unfair and disappointing for your friend.
